However, Tai's father was impatient so he went ahead and asked one of the staff, Miss Huang, who worked at the CMA located in Huwei, if she was able to marry Tai Chiang Ching.

Although there was no follow-up after this incident, Tai Chiang Ching felt very embarrassed and angry. Since Tai's father hadn't asked about his intentions, instead talking about marriage with others directly, it scared women away. However, Tai Chiang Ching also understood his father's intention. Actually, also because of the CMA, Tai Chiang Ching was able to get to know his wife, Hsu Hsiu-yun, who is 5 years younger than Tai and also worked at the CMA. Thus, this marriage can be considered "God's will." Interestingly, Hsu was Miss Huang's classmate.

Hsu Hsiu-yun and Tai Chiang Ching's uncle and aunt had graduated from National Tuku Vocational High School in Yunlin County. She was also Miss Huang's high school classmate. Hsu and Huang planned to pursue higher education together, so Miss Huang was preparing to resign from the CMA. Hsu then said, "I can take over the position." Although Hsu was just kidding, Miss Huang thought she was serious and recommended her to Tai.

After Tai agreed to hire Hsu, she felt surprised because she hadn't planned to work at the CMA. She had originally planned to attend a tuition centre in order to prepare for the college entry exam. However, Miss Huang had to resign right away and was urged to find replacement, so she told Hsu to just go and study for a week. As Hsu started to work at the CMA, she felt that her boss, Tai Chiang Ching, was a kind and professional teacher. Therefore, she felt pleased to work in this environment and came to be more interested in her job. Meanwhile Miss Huang had decided to stop her plan of going to college because of her financial condition, so Hsu also started to seriously think about her career and future.

Since she had just graduated from high school, she had still not decided what kind of career was suitable for her and tried to apply for a position as a beautician. When she prepared to resign from the CMA, Tai Chiang Ching told her, "I'll retain your position. If you don't like that job, you can still come back." Hsu was touched and thought, "What a nice boss!" Afterwards, Hsu found that the beauty industry was indeed not suitable for her and went back to the CMA.

Maybe Tai Chiang Ching had known that Hsu would find herself unsuitable for beauty industry, thus showing that Tai had a good understanding of others' personalities and strengths.

Tai Chiang Ching's marriage was considered to be fate because he later found out he and his wife had much in common. Tai's mother, Tai Lin Chai-lian, and Hsu's mother, Huang Jin Yin, were acquainted with each other. They lived in the same village. When they were young, they worked part-time on the farm together and took care of each other. Also, Tai's aunt and Hsu's mother were very good friends. Because of these relationships, Tai and his wife especially treasured each other. When Tai first established his own enterprise, he suffered gastric pain. This might have been because he worked part-time at Pepsi as a porter in Taipei before he went to high school. Whenever he felt thirsty, he drank Pepsi while working there, so his stomach was affected. Besides, he was so busy and tense when he first started business that he often skipped meals. Therefore, his gastric pain was getting worse. He would vomit whenever he felt nervous so Hsu's mother would then prepare him some nutritious and healthy meals.
