Afterwards, Hsu showed her excellent performance by teaching abacus mental arithmetic and came to be highly respected by her students and their parents. She often received compliments and presents from students and parents during special holidays. Hsu once taught as many as 230 students during a summer vacation. During that vacation, she was often busy travelling around the neighbourhood riding her motorcycle to visit students. Hsu and her husband have been operating their abacus mental arithmetic institute for nearly 30 years.

During these 30 years, CMA's business in Taiwan experienced a period of difficulties. Until its peak in 2000, the CMA gradually started to scale back in response to the weak economy and low birth rate in Taiwan. Meanwhile, the CMA sought to expand overseas and started an enterprise transition at this turning point. Hsu has been Tai's family and most important career partner. In Hsu's eyes, Tai is sensible but also sensitive since he knows how to observe and test people's abilities.

Before Tai and Hsu got married, Tai took Hsu to visit his former boss, Wang Hsu-jing, who worked at an accounting firm in LuKang Township, Chang-hua County. Tai asked Wang to observe his future wife's personality. Tai remembered an occasion when they met at Huiwei Station. He took out three red envelopes with $100, $500, $1000 NTD in them, respectively, and asked Hsu to choose one at random in order to test her luck. Hsu drew the envelope with $1000 NTD enclosed, which surprised Tai. He thought, "She must bring me luck."

After they got married, Hsu was organizing Tai's materials and found that he had made a note of what kind of wife he would choose. According to the note, he'd like his wife to be "modest, come from a loving family, and be willing to learn." Now Tai's dream has come true, as he had married Hsu. Hsu is not only a good wife to Tai, but also a great helper for his career. Hsu indeed brought him fortune in his career, family and interpersonal relationships.
