For Hsu, Tai is always the pilot and guard of the family. Regardless of whether Tai is in Taiwan or not, he always thinks of the family. In 2003, when Tai was expanding his business in Malaysia, she encountered some financial problems regarding the company and the household. She then called Tai for help.

Tai calmly asked his wife not to worry, because he had already prepared NT$ 100,000 in his study room at home for emergency. Hsu then was grateful to have married such a responsible husband that loves the family so much. She and their children could then live without worrying.

In 2010, Tai and Hsu reached their goal of establishing a career in teaching abacus mental arithmetic. As an old saying goes, “A successful life should have a house, car, wife, son and money.” Hsu therefore decided to go back to school to continue her education. On an occasion, she drove her Mercedes-Benz to participate in an event held outside the school. Her classmates were surprised when they saw that she was driving a luxury car because she was only about 40 years old. They all guessed Hsu and her husband must have inherited wealth from their late parents.

Hsu replied, “We made our own fortune. When we were just starting our business, we were very poor and with only NT$ 200 sometimes. We were in debt of millions of dollars. We’ll always remember those difficult days.”

Towards the future

Looking back to those struggling years, Tai one day accidentally found out that he has a meaningful name. A Chinese name usually conveys the expectation and wishes from one’s parents, maybe even from the whole family.

As the first grandson of the Tais, Tai Chiang Ching’s name was given by a professional fortune teller who was asked upon request by his grandfather and father. The fortune teller said, “The name of Tai Chiang Ching will help the person to have a successful life as the person grows older.”

When Tai was young, he didn't have excellent school performance. He also often had conflicts with his father during his teenage years. He even left home to work and study. During high school, Tai's mother died. He took over the responsibility of his younger brother. He tried hard to save money for business before serving in the army. Looking back at those years, Tai is very appreciative. He believes that his life experience is predestined based on his name.

Tai's life was indeed getting better as he grew. He is also getting to understand his grandfather and father's expectations of him.

The second decade in the 21st century is the key decade for CMA to grow stably. Tai had used the first half of his life on the enterprise of abacus mental arithmetic education. In the future, he will continue on the career of expanding his business of abacus mental arithmetic education to the world. Moreover, he will encourage the growth of abacus mental arithmetic that has existed for more than three thousand years.
